

The Stone Soup Leadership Institute's
 Story of the Week: Elliot Connor
 Human Nature Projects
 Week of July 25 - July 31, 2021

Sunday: Thrive Global: Human Nature Projects

#SundayThoughts: This week's story on Arianna Huffington's Thrive Global showcases Elliot Connor from Australia, whose passion for animals inspired him to start Human Nature Projects, a volunteer club for conservationists to help save endangered species. Since its founding in 2019, it has grown to more than 1,400 volunteers in 110 countries!

Monday Post 1: Quote: Elliot Connor

#MondayMotivation: This November when Elliot Connor graduates from high school he and a team of wildlife filmmakers will produce a 24-hour live stream of wildlife in countries around the world to get people to reevaluate their relationship with nature—to rethink what it means for us as humans, to share our planet with other species. As the global population collaborates to address our sustainability issues, the need for information expands.

This book highlights the stories that mainstream media does not cover! This book is great because it does not focus on one particular issue or person, but displays that work that individuals are doing around the world to solve our climate change issues. It is important to read about intergenerational stories from individuals who have taken on the challenge that others will not. I highly recommend taking the time to read some of the stories from this book!

Wednesday Post 1: Honor Roll: Human Nature Projects

#CalltoAction: Founded by Elliot Connor in 2019, Human Nature Projects oversees 110 semi-independent country youth teams that design volunteer conservation projects and fundraising to have the biggest possible impact for animals at the local level. While the Australia team works on bush fires, the Congo team focuses on climate change, and the team in Uganda is fights to rescue chimpanzees.

An inspiring book from @stonesoupleader which might, just a little bit, help the world.

Midwest Book Review

One of the most important books a children's library or environmental leader can buy only later generations know Stone Soup for a Sustainable World provides a host of inspiration and a message of how making a difference is important, and shows the steps to actually achieve these goals.
