Sunday: Story

<https://sustainabilityisfun.net/wp-content/uploads/2021/08/story-shilpa-jain.pdf>

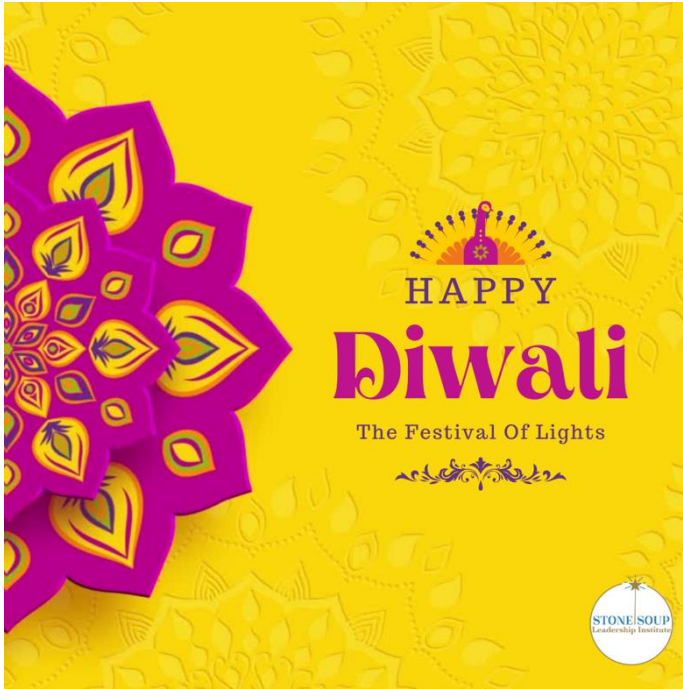

READ how Shilpa Jain led YES! to bring together artists, activists, educators, lawyers, dreamers, visionaries, healers, academics, data analysts and small business owners, “and many more...We come together to learn from each other, to face our fears and challenges, to uncover solutions and ways forward, to dream of a more truthful, loving, whole world – and to practice ways to get there.”

How might we learn from them?

Sunday: Veterans Day

Today, we honor all those who served our country!

Monday: Happy Diwali

Diwali, a Festival of Lights, is India's biggest celebration of the year. Indians light outside their homes to symbolize the inner light that protects from spiritual darkness.

STONE SOUP

Saturday: Press

“My activism has always been defined by what’s doable rather than what are we fighting against,” says Shilpa Jain. “What are the positive things we can create in the world, and how are they being created right now? I’m interested in supporting people where their passion is now, as well as trying to unearth their passions through a process of listening and dialogue. There are a thousand entry points to challenge this system and shape alternative possibilities...”
